

WADE IS SENTENCED

Killed Lover of His Sister at Lynchburg.

JURY OUT NINETEEN HOURS

Judge Tells Prisoner that Jury Was Merciful to Him—In His First Trial
He Was Convicted of Murder in the First Degree—Two Men Held
Out for a Lenient Verdict.

Special to The Washington Herald.

Lynchburg, Va., April 30.—After having the case under consideration for nineteen hours, the jury today in the Wade case returned a verdict of guilty of second degree murder, and his punishment was fixed at eighteen years in the penitentiary.

Counsel for the defense made a formal motion for a new trial, which was promptly overruled by Judge Christian, and he immediately sentenced the prisoner, telling him that the jury had been very merciful to him in its verdict. The verdict is suspended for thirty days, pending an effort to take the case to the Supreme Court of Appeals. An immense crowd was in court when the verdict was read.

The verdict created not a little surprise, as it was generally believed that the Commonwealth had made out a stronger case than at the first trial, when Wade was found guilty of first degree murder. Wade shot and killed Isaac Higginbottom, who was to have married the sister of the condemned man, the shooting taking place on the James River Bridge the night of January 23, when Higginbottom was going home from a call on his sweetheart. It is understood that two men held out for second degree-murder, bringing the other ten men to their view.

SONS OPEN SESSION.

National Society, S. A. R. Has Distinguished Visitors.

Baltimore, Md., April 30.—Baltimore's patriotism was thoroughly aroused to-day by the presence of the twentieth annual congress of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, which is holding its sessions at the Hotel Belvedere. Some of the delegates and alternates, and others are here as visitors, as the two societies are in close accord.

Prominent among the daughters are Mrs. Matthew T. Scott, who was elected president general after a spirited contest in Washington last week, and Mrs. Donald McLean, the retiring president general, who was a warm supporter of Mrs. Scott. Both Mrs. McLean, who is a Maryland-born woman, formerly Miss Ritchie, of Frederick, and Mrs. Scott met with a most cordial reception from the local daughters.

At the opening session at the Belvedere Cardinal Gibbons was present in the red robes of his office and delivered the invocation. Judge Henry Stockbridge, the president general, then introduced Mayor Preston, who he presented as a citizen of Baltimore. He is not one of our members yet, but we will have him," said the president general. The mayor extended a very cordial welcome to the delegates.

FAVOR BUYING OF EMBASSIES.

Organization Effected to Promote

Acquisition of Homes Abroad.

New York, April 30.—The committee which has been formed to promote the acquisition by the United States of permanent homes in foreign capitals for its ambassadors met to-day and organized itself into the American Embassy Association.

The meeting was held at a luncheon given at the City Club by Frederick Townsend Martin. E. Clarence Jones was chosen president, and Frank D. Pavey its secretary and treasurer. The following executive committee was elected: Henri Cachard, who resides at Paris; Frederic R. Couderc, George Cromwell, Dr. Thomas Darlington, George C. Heller, E. Clarence Jones, Frederick Townsend Martin, Alex. T. Mason, Frank D. Pavey, Charles M. Schwab, Albert Shaw, George R. Sheldon, William B. Vanlinden, and William E. Willcox.

It is provided that any former ambassador or other person of distinction may be invited to become an honorary member of the association. The executive committee is empowered to add to its own numbers at its own discretion.

REV. HUGH M. SCOTT KILLED.

Professor of Theology Crushed by Street Car in Chicago.

Chicago, April 30.—Rev. Hugh M. Scott, who for twenty-seven years has been a professor in ecclesiastical history at the Chicago Theological Seminary, was killed late this afternoon by being caught and crushed between two Van Buren street cars at State and Van Buren streets.

Mr. Scott was boarding a car to return to his home when the accident occurred. The accident resulted from the traffic system maintained at the end of the Van Buren street car line. The two cars line narrow to a single switch track near State street, and two cars, one east of the switch on the single track and one just west of the switch, were loading with passengers.

Mr. Scott was grasping the hand rail of the west-bound car when the east-bound car moved out over the switch and started to pass the other on the same side on which passengers were mounting. He was crushed between the cars. Prof. Scott was sixty-two years old, and well known in the Congregational church.

Widow of Artist Ends Life.
Pittsboro, N. C., April 30.—Mrs. Eliza Nowotny, aged fifty, widow of Vincent Nowotny, who was one of the best-known artists of the Middle West, committed suicide some time to-day by cutting her throat and slashing her right wrist with a razor while alone in her flat in Norwood, a suburb.

WHEN THE KING AWOKE

bended the recent scene, and caused the king to shrink from her touch. A pistol bullet—a struggle bare-handed for the mastery—even a knife driven into the back—and then the plunge over the brink, would have been only the legitimate progress of a desperate game; but this allurement—this baiting by fair flesh—this tolling by the arts of love—and then the deadly thrust to the depths, that sickened, and made for revolt. What might be strategy in man was treachery in woman. Now was the duchess trebly damned: stren, snake, and tiger. He had known her as the first, he had suspected her as the second, and he had her seen her as the third. And the king, also, shuddered.

Unchallenged the four the duchess, as the gulch yet unlighted by the moon; the way amid it lying obscure and dank. But the bridge was bathed all in the broad beams; the two trunks, bare through much, showed white and clean, and the king, sufficient to afford passage over so black and ugly a rift. Up out of the chasm, and apparently held suspended, floated the dull roar of the water.

At the bridge the party halted. The queen gave a piteous cry, and resisted, like a child.

"We must not stop," reminded the duchess; and she crossed, swiftly, unswerving.

"No, no," cried the queen, covering her eyes with her free arm.

The flowing black sleeve fell back and the king saw that she was clutching fast in her hand the oval, silver-backed hand-mirror of the toilet case.

Sir Hugo suddenly picked her up, and carrying her made firm, straight course to the other side. The king followed.

The jester set down the queen. "We had better stay here until day, and heaved at the end of the bridging log.

He hugged it, but staggered with the weight. Sir Hugo aided; together they dug their feet by inches to the edge, an inch more, another—and together they sprang back as the trunk went scraping, crashing, into the dusky gap. A splash sounded.

The other," panted the king.

The second pine trunk clattered into the abyss, and splashed. The chasm was bridged. The king and Sir Hugo straightened, and listened. But across, where the moonlight was creeping into the gulch, and the moon lay shining with those pure rays as impartial to its cabins as to the stainless snow-cap high above, no notes of alarm were arising.

The party proceeded a way into the dense forest and there was forced to stop by the queen's exhaustion.

"We had better stay here until day," said the jester. "It is hard traveling through the wood, and we will gain by resting."

"Have we staid enough, you think?" asked the duchess, wearily.

"Yes, they cannot follow us until day, and then they have the gorge to bridge."

"Unless they have another crossing," spoke the king.

"Yes; unless they have another crossing," answered Sir Hugo. "But we have done our best."

He leaned back against the tree behind him; his large head nodded, and drooped, and fell forward upon his breast. A snore escaped him. He slept.

Upon the edge of the open space the king likewise seated himself, against a trunk. The duchess wistfully looked at him, a moment, and then she arose and slipped her arm about his neck.

"Forgive me for what I said, up there when you angered me," she whispered. "Won't you?"

He made no response; her hand, cold, imploring, crept to his, and he loathed himself.

"You are so cruel to me, Henry," she continued, patiently. "You made me crazy. A woman has to defend herself. I said things I ought not to have said. See, I am crying myself. I am your friend, I am. I followed you for love of you—just you, dearie. What I said at first was the truth. Forget what I said afterward, when I was crazed." She paused, but the king sat, hard and expressionless, save for a frown between his eyes. "Is it that you hate me now, because I am a murderer?" she essayed, with a sob. "Am I a murderer, Henry?"

"I do not want to kill him, but it was the only thing I do. I did it for your sake. There is nothing I would not do for your sake—yes, I, Myrtle of Marto." She laughed bitterly. "I never thought I should say this to any man—but here I am."

She waited; he spoke not. She choked back another sob, and submissively, dog-like, gently laid her head in his lap.

"Kiss me, Henry," she entreated. She paused, but the king sat, hard and expressionless, save for a frown between his eyes. "I am so tired—oh, so tired. I have done a great deal, haven't I? Kiss me but once, and say you forgive me, and I will go to sleep. Do you want to sleep, dear? I don't mean to keep you awake. I will sit up, and you can lean against me. It will be more comfortable for you and I won't stir—no, not an inch. You can sleep till morning. But kiss me—please."

The king roughly moved, and resisted himself, against the duchess, who effectively after him; then she remained prone upon her face, sobbing miserably, arms outstretched along the ground in his direction.

Her sobs gradually died; she, too, slept.

DIE IN BLACK HAND FIRE.

Eight Perish and Twenty-five Hurt in Tenement Disaster.

New York, April 30.—Eight persons are known to be dead, one is believed to be buried beneath tons of debris, and twenty-five persons are in hospitals, eighteen of whom are dying, as a result of an incendiary fire which early to-day swept from cellar to roof of the five story double tenement at 37 Spring street. The fire was started by agents of the Black Hand.

More than fifty women and children were rescued by policemen, many of whom were hurled from the third and fourth floor escapes into the arms of those on the sidewalks. Several women and children were thrown off fire escapes by men in their efforts to get to safety. Many were trampled on and left lying unconscious on the various floors by men in their wild rush for the roof and fire escapes.

On the ground floor of the house is the grocery store of Jacob Bruck. It was through Bruck's refusal to pay the tribute to the Black Hand that the fire was started.

On April 18 last Bruck received a letter in which $1,000 was demanded. It was from the "Black Hand Society," and read as follows:

"We demand $1,000 or death. Bring it to 36 West 125th street. If it is not paid, the Black Hand lives."

This letter was signed "Black Hand Society," and on the sheet of paper were many skulls and crossbones. Immediately after receiving the letter Bruck telegraphed the Standard for protection to investigate. However, on last Monday the store owner received another letter, written in a similar strain, which had been mailed from substitution A of the post-office. This letter was also signed "Black Hand Society," and was also signed "Black Hand Society."

RUNAWAYS ARRESTED.

Wanderlust Lands Two Boys in the Lock-up.

Two boys, who preferred Washington to their homes, arrived in the National Capital last night and were promptly arrested. They are held as fugitives from their parents until the stories they tell can be verified and their cases investigated.

The boys are Jackson Kempler, twelve years old, of 387 North Jefferson street, Philadelphia, and Parker Ware, sixteen years old, of Chickasaw, Okla. Ware has had more experience than Kempler in the ways of the world, having provided for himself for several months. Kempler has been away from his home only a few days.

SIR ROBERT BOND MOBBED

Former Premier of Newfoundland

Hurled Into Sea by Populace.

Exposure of Plot to Bring About Confederation of Island with Canada.

Montreal, Quebec, April 30.—The discovery made on Tuesday that Sir Robert Bond, though apparently antagonistic to the move, has been quietly negotiating with the Canadian government with a view to bringing about confederation between Canada and Newfoundland, has aroused the whole island, according to a special dispatch from St. Johns received here this evening.

At an election meeting at Western Bay to-day, where Sir Robert had called in his little steamer, in which he is making his election tour, the premier was met by an angry mob, grabbed by a band of stalwart fishermen, raised shoulder high, and hurled from the end of the pier on which he had just landed into the ocean, a drop of fifteen feet.

He was rescued by members of his crew, and immediately put to sea to avoid further trouble, although he insisted, almost before he had rubbed the water from his eyes, that he would go back and face his assailants and prove to them that he was staunch to the interests of Newfoundland and the fisher folk.

Never has an election been so bitterly fought. The exposure of the confederation plot has resulted in Bond making tour charges that Sir Edward Morris, the present premier, is in the pay of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, which is accused of supplying the money to carry on Morris' campaign. Morris has made an affidavit denying the statement absolutely.

Bond, last night at Carboner, stated that Morris tried to bribe a colleague for $50,000. Morris denies the truth of this statement, and threatens criminal libel. The people are positively aflame everywhere. It is believed that Morris, who tied Bond in the election of a couple of months ago, will sweep the country, although two days ago, prior to the exposure of the alleged confederation plot, both were equally popular.

DEAD IN STORMS
NOW NUMBER 167

and a cold wave in the wake of the first and second storms which were general last night over the Rockies to the Allegheny Mountains.

Details from last night's storms in the Mississippi Valley indicate the death toll will total more than 100. The number of seriously injured is large. One estimate places the total more or less hurt at 2,400.

The greatest loss of life was in Arkansas boundary, from the Oklahoma line to Tennessee. Only a few weeks ago a tornado killed and injured many in the Arkansas border, but not in the towns that were hit last night. Brinkley, in East Central Arkansas, lost most of a week ago, while last night Centerville is reported to have suffered most, twenty persons being killed.

Six Killed Near Altos.
Altos, Mo., April 30.—Six persons are known to have been killed outright in this section of Oregon county last night by the tornado. The dead: Benjamin F. Sanders and daughter, Lois; George Whitworth and wife, and Robert Frost and wife.

The tornado-swept scene is one-half to one mile wide. The roads are impassable, and telegraph lines are cut off and reports of greater destruction are anticipated. The Newberry family was left standing on the floor of their home, the wind carrying off its roof and walls. Lee Cookman's family was treated in the same miraculous manner.

Tornado Hits Prison.
Indianapolis, April 30.—The State prison at Michigan City was struck by a tornado and the entire west wall, 900 feet long, was wrecked to its foundation. Nearly every factory building inside was unroofed, and one shop was partly wrecked. Not a smokestack stands. Wreckage is strewn over the ground and the shops are at a standstill. All the 1,214 prisoners, except 20, are idle in their cells, and the opening in the wall is guarded by a company of the Indiana National Guard from South Bend.

REVOLUTION IN MOROCCO.
Movement in Favor of Deposed Sultan—Situation Serious.

There is serious trouble in Morocco, and indications are that a revolutionary movement in favor of Abdul Aziz, the deposed Sultan, has been started in the vicinity of Fez.

The American representative at Tangier telegraphed the State Department yesterday that reports from the interior of the country indicated serious conditions.

Bands of tribesmen have entered Mequinez, a short distance from Fez, and sacked the town. The dispatches from Fez is in a state of siege.

WORST IN TURKEY OVER.
Ambassador Lelshman Reports Conditions as Quietening Down.

Mr. Lelshman, the American Ambassador in Turkey, telegraphed the State Department yesterday that he believed the worst of the troubles in Turkey is now over. The disturbed districts informed of the ambassador that at Hadjin and elsewhere in the trouble zone indications are the trouble is almost over. The arrival of troops at the disturbed points and the change in government has had a most salutary effect. Mr. Lelshman believes order will be completely restored soon.

The State Department yesterday received an appeal from an American missionary organization asking that the missionaries at Hadjin be protected from massacre and starvation. The department has done all it could in the matter already.

It has been decided that the armored cruisers North Carolina and Montana, now en route from the Baltic to the Mediterranean, will be sent to Messina instead of Alexandria, as first planned. Messina is on the coast and in touch with Adams and surrounding districts by a railroad. If necessary one of the ships can be sent to Alexandria to protect the other.

Two cruisers probably will reach Gibraltar May 4 and Messina five or six days later.
